

Creating A Legacy

Think for a moment about someone you admire. This person may still be living or may have died. He or she may be someone famous or someone very close to you. But in some way, this person is leaving, or has left, his or her "mark on the world."

Who is/was this individual? What qualities or accomplishments do you remember and admire about him or her?

The
traits and actions that you've just identified are part of this person's

LEGACY

We use this word to describe things that a person or group leaves behind for future generations -- not just material things like money and possessions, but lessons and traditions that survive for years to come. These lessons and traditions continue to instill a sense of pride, hope and inspiration.

don't know what your destiny will be, but one thing I know: the only ones among you who will be really happy are those who will have sought and found how to serve.

Dr. Albert Schweitzer

Building a positive legacy is all about making a difference in the lives of others and leaving your mark on the world. You, too, will leave a legacy. Your legacy doesn't have to involve doing things that help you grab headlines or awards, but it will be a reflection of who you are and what you value. It's something you will shape day by day through your actions, as you demonstrate significant aspects of your character and talents. It will reveal the ways in which you choose to live your life with a sense of passion and purpose.

Use the space provided to record especially significant items from the list of character traits and accomplishments which your class creates.
